

This effect is from the game Final Fantasy 14. The effect comes every time you cast a spell called verflare. The effect has mini balls of fire next to a larger ball of fire. The balls grow and then they disappear after they reach a certain size. I like how the effect has the yellow outline. The inside of the balls are transparent but you see the effect of fire inside. I think the effect is made by creating one ball and then smaller balls were made after the one big ball reached a certain size around the big ball. The effect looks the same at all angles so I think is a 2D effect that seems 3D. The effect is the same every time no matter the lighting or the place.